OmniDyne Foundry Class Dreadnought

Like many smaller corporations within the Directorate, OmniDyne Systems maintained a substantial space fleet, even before its massive fiscal losses compelled it to sell up its planet-based assets. Mobile manufacturing facilities enable OmniDyne to take their means of production directly to their distant target markets. Although not intended to be warships, the Foundry Class is a valuable asset to any corporate fleet. As such it is very heavily armed in order to defend itself from unwelcome visitors that find their way through its formidable defensive screen. Like most Directorate vessels, the Foundry's main armament is mostly composed of fearsome multi-barrelled plasma projectors, fed from the searing fury of its oversized powerplant. The Foundry's onboard production facilities also give many advantages in battle. Specialist weaponry, such as biological weaponry and torpedoes packed with purpose-built assault cyborgs can be constructed within the vessel and deployed instantly from its weapon systems. The vessel also houses extensive repair facilities and maintenance craft for field repairs. A Foundry accompanied by a strong escort fleet is a mighty opponent for any enemy - not least any former customers who think they can renege on their contracts with the vessel's corporation owners!
